Getting the most out of being a manager in The Salvation Army

Brought to you by the Centre for Leadership Development, Booth College of Mission

18-20 April 2018

At Booth College of Mission, Upper Hutt

» As a new manager I could not have asked for better information « Nicky

You are more than a manager, you are part of a mission. Whether you're a new manager or have been around for a while, this highly practical course provides a wealth of information and skills to help you get the most out of your role within The Salvation Army.

Course content

You already know the basics of management, but this short, punchy and practical course will help you make the most of your skills. You'll work on projects where you learn Salvation Army processes and how you can get the help you need. You'll also learn about where you fit into the big picture of The Salvation Army, meet the senior leadership team and share ideas with other managers. The key focus is on practical skills like:

- employing and managing paid staff
- leadership skills
- creating a safe, happy and healthy workplace
- managing difficult scenarios, and finding real solutions
- how to access and manage resources
- meeting the people who are there to help you

» Having been a manager for 14 years, I wish this course had been around back when I started the job. An excellent course that was well prepared and presented « Philip

» It taught me a lot, as well as showing me what I'm doing right « Linda

Who is it for?

Anyone who manages paid staff within The Salvation Army, including officers and managers of

- Corps
- Family Stores
- Community Ministries
- Addictions Services
- Home Care
- Education & Employment
- Supportive Accommodation
- Early Childhood Education Centres

» I picked up lots of useful hints, tips and ideas. It's really useful to know the resources available to us « Keren

Course Facilitators

The course is facilitated by The Salvation Army's Human Resources team who will cover a range of management issues and other senior leaders give the big picture of our history and mission.
